APPLICATION FORM: HOLLYWOOD AGENT

Do you enjoy inflicting pain, but proctology seems like a dead-end job? Would you be the perfect heartless repo man, if only you could run faster? You've thought about mortuaries and their steady, recession-proof work, but the job tends to require so much of that pesky thing called empathy.

Wait—maybe you could combine your favorite aspects of all three and work as a Hollywood agent! We can't tell you whose back we had to scratch, but here at Watch! we've scored the top-secret Tinseltown job application that could have you undermining the career of a hardworking actor, writer or director even before your entree arrives at The Ivy. And if your friends or family have a problem with that, just remind them: Yes, being a 10-percenter may be a dirty job, but after all, somebody's got to do it. — Jim Colucci

Name: _____

Gender: Male Female, but I have a mouth like a longshoreman

Education level:

- William Morris mailroom.
- Got disappointing score on my LSAT.

- Graduated college with unmarketable arts degree.
- My film school thesis project is floating around on YouTube.

When it comes to religion, I worship: (Check all that apply.)

- Yahweh, Allah or Buddha.
- The Holy Trinity: Spielberg, Katzenberg and Geffen.

(If only first box is checked, this completes your application.)

- Satan.
- Money.

As a child, I: (Check all that apply.)

- Got 10 percent of my siblings' allowance.
- Closed deals over games of kickball.
- Had a house account at Chuck E. Cheese's.

- Sided up to the smart kid, copied her answers, then turned her in for cheating.
- Staged a sickout during the Christmas play for a percentage of the net.

I want to be an agent because: (Check all that apply.)

- Lawyers have to have some scruples.
- Drug dealing is dangerous.
- I'm too ugly to be a model.

- A dominatrix can't wear Armani.
- Too many South American countries already have dictators.

My favorite clients would be:

- The truly gifted and visionary artists whose work enriches humankind.
- The ones who bring in the biggest commissions.
- The ones who send the most expensive holiday gifts.

- The ones who are nice to my assistant, so I don't have to be.
- The ones whose work I may not understand at all, but some other agency desperately wants to sign.
- The ones who never call me.

(If first box is checked, this completes your application.)

If I weren't working as an agent, I'd be: (Check all that apply.)

- Swimming with actual sharks.
- Trafficking black market organs.
- Conducting insider trading.

- Negotiating the release of hostages whose kidnappings I may or may not have arranged.
- Skimming from the drive-through register at Carl's Jr.

My worst nightmare on the job would be:

- While in a meeting with client Brad Pitt, he uses the phrases "passion project" and "I'll do it for scale."
- Client Katherine Heigl calls a press conference "to get something off my chest."
- Client John Travolta invites me to a live reading of the sequel he's written to Bottlefield Earth.
- My writer client creates a popular "evil agent" character, but no one recognizes he's me.

- Someone in the office spreads a rumor that I live in the Valley.
- My company AmEx gets downgraded to mere platinum.
- I have to park in the structure rather than in a reserved spot on the lot.
- Waiters stop handing me head shots, valets stop slipping screen-plays on my front seat—in short, my life ceases to have meaning.

Complete the following analogy: "Vegetarian" is to "hamburger" as "agent" is to ...

- "Long Island accent."
- "Clothing labels that don't end in a vowel."
- "Real friends."

- "Truth."
- "Compassion."

In 100 words or less, please describe a situation where you wouldn't sell out your own grandmother to a large media corporation. _____
