

APPLICATION FORM: WARDROBE SUPERVISOR

Have you ever been meandering through Bloomingdale's and come upon a shirt so beautiful you couldn't help but think, "This would look perfect on Marg Helgenberger!" If so ... well, you might need professional help. After all, you probably don't even know Marg Helgenberger, so why are you considering buying her clothes? Then again, maybe you should consider a career as a wardrobe supervisor, the crew member who works behind the scenes on a series to provide the clothes for its characters. Recently here at Watch!, we were going through the pockets of an old sports jacket when we came across this job application that could soon have you on a company-paid shopping spree. Just remember when you get to the mall, pick up a little something pretty for your new friend Marg. — Jim Colucci

Name: _____

Gender: Female Gay male

I want to be a wardrobe supervisor because (check all that apply):

- I have none of my own money left to spend.
- It's always been a dream of mine to dress dogs and children.
- I've been putting looks together ever since I was in Garanimals.
- I enjoy "releasing crotches."
- I steam, therefore I am.

If I weren't styling actors, I'd be (check all that apply):

- A fashion editor at Vogue.
- A personal shopper at Saks.
- A perfume spritzer at Bloomingdale's.
- A fitting room attendant at Loehmann's.
- Avoiding collection agency calls in regard to my Barneys credit card.

My own personal wardrobe consists of (check all that apply):

- More animal prints than you'd find at the zoo.
- A multitude of high-end scarves, wraps, hats and fanny packs.
- Oversized shmattees to hide my many trips to the Craft Service table.
- Mismatched and ill-fitting hand-me-downs from talent.
- All of the above.

When I enter a designer boutique, the sales associates immediately (check all that apply):

- Invite me to a private trunk show, followed by a meet-and-greet with the designer.
- Ask if Simon Baker is really more like The Mentalist or his character in The Devil Wears Prada.
- Offer me a glass of champagne.
- Ask if I would like someone to walk my Yorkies, named Dolce and Gabbana.
- Call security.

My worst job nightmare would be to find out that:

- This week's episode will be in fantasy flashback, with the whole cast at a Victorian wedding.
- All of my actresses are simultaneously pregnant.
- My needy leading man has declared he's allergic to all natural fabrics.
- Winona Ryder wants to tour the wardrobe trailer.

Which of the following items would not be found in your wardrobe toolkit?

- Wristlet pincushion
- Topstick
- Stitch witch
- Chicken cutlets
- Price tags from Dress Barn

Please rank the following shades of black in order from light to dark (1 to 5):

- _____ Ebony _____ Onyx _____ Jet _____ Pitch _____ Kohl

In 100 words or less, please answer the following question: Karl Lagerfeld—better fat or thin, and why?

